

A Smarter Path to Liquidity

How Advisors Monetize, Grow, and Stay Independent with Concurrent

Executive Summary

Across the wealth management industry, consolidation and capital are reshaping what it means to be independent.

Too often, advisors are forced to choose between liquidity and control, leaving them two options: selling their life's work to roll-ups or staying illiquid to preserve autonomy.

In this environment, where the independent wealth management ecosystem is often grouped into three broad archetypes—aggregators, integrators, and service and technology platforms—Concurrent Investment Advisors stands apart. We blend full-service infrastructure with a unique minority partnership model that empowers advisors to access liquidity, fund succession, and pursue growth, all on their own terms. Advisors remain in control, retain their brand and P&L, and participate in the upside of a larger enterprise they help to build. This whitepaper unpacks how Concurrent's approach creates alignment, flexibility, and enterprise value for the advisor community through three real-world case studies:

- 1. De-Risk and Access Liquidity: How a $900k producer grew to $1.5MM and took more than $3.2MM off the table while retaining 66% ownership of the practice.
- 2. Facilitate Internal Succession: How next-generation leaders transition into ownership without burdening the senior partner.
- 3. Fund Inorganic Growth: How advisory firms leverage partnership capital to scale through strategic acquisitions.

By design, Concurrent's partnership capital isn't an exit strategy—it's a growth strategy. Each case study illustrates how entrepreneurial advisors use the platform to diversify wealth, build enduring equity, and deepen their connection to a community that believes in shared success.

The future of independence isn't isolation. It's aligned partnership.

– Nate Lenz, CEO and Founder, Concurrent

Haven for Entrepreneurs

Concurrent is a platform for growth-minded, independent financial advisors seeking scale, support, and access to partial liquidity without sacrificing ownership or autonomy.

In an era when many firms are being absorbed by private-equity-backed consolidators, Concurrent empowers advisors to expand their capabilities while preserving their independence and identity.

The firm's philosophy centers on the belief that entrepreneurship and collaboration are not mutually exclusive. Concurrent provides the scale and sophistication of a national enterprise for advisors with institutional pricing, advanced technology, and shared infrastructure while maintaining the independence and flexibility that define the profession. Advisors affiliate as independent business owners under the Concurrent umbrella, retaining their own brands, teams, and client relationships, while outsourcing non-revenue functions such as compliance, billing, operations, and custodial management to Concurrent's dedicated support teams.

This structure allows advisors to remain independent but not alone, running their own business with full control over how they serve clients, while benefiting from shared resources and economies of scale. The firm's home-office team operates across Tampa, Dallas, and San Diego, providing the kind of institutional infrastructure typically accessible only to large, integrated RIAs but without the rigidity or one-size-fits-all oversight.

At its core, Concurrent celebrates individuality. The platform supports a wide variety of advisory models, from investment-centric firms to holistic planners, family offices, and retirement-plan consultants. Rather than prescribing a single investment philosophy or service model, Concurrent provides the tools, scale, and guidance that allow each advisor to thrive on their own terms.

The firm's culture reinforces this entrepreneurial ethos. Advisory practices are treated as true partners whose feedback helps shape platform development and strategic priorities. Through its advisor board, regional councils, and collaborative peer forums, Concurrent ensures that advisor voices drive decision-making. This "by advisors, for advisors" model fosters continuous improvement and deep alignment between the platform and those it serves.

For advisors seeking to grow, scale, or transition ownership without giving up control, Concurrent offers not just a platform, but a community defined by collaboration, shared ownership, and mutual respect. As a result, if you are Powered By Concurrent, you are a part of a national network of independent entrepreneurs empowered to compete with the largest firms in the industry, while maintaining the authenticity and agility that define true independence.

Where Concurrent Fits in the Competitive Landscape

As the RIA landscape continues to consolidate under private-equity ownership, a growing divide has emerged between firms building for scale and those building for entrepreneurs. Concurrent stands firmly on the side of the latter—designed not to absorb independent advisors, but to empower them.

The independent wealth management ecosystem can be grouped into three broad archetypes that reflect differing philosophies on scale, control, and advisor autonomy:

Aggregators

Aggregators create scale by affiliating independent practices. They typically promise “independence with support,” but as they mature, their focus can shift toward centralization and enterprise-level efficiency to maximize valuation multiples. For entrepreneurial advisors, this can feel like trading one form of dependency for another—maintaining the language of independence while operating within a controlled corporate framework. When evaluating aggregators, not all are created equal. The nuance lies in understanding their capital backing and whether the duration and control dynamics of that capital supports their vision.

Integrators

These firms are aggregators by nature but rather than embrace individuality, these firms pursue centralized branding, more rigid investment platforms, and operational control to capture economies of scale and standardize the client experience. They often attract what can be described as “white flag” businesses which can be defined as advisors nearing retirement or fatigue who raise the “white flag”, signaling a willingness to surrender autonomy for convenience or liquidity. While the integrator model offers efficiency and uniformity, it often comes at the cost of individuality, entrepreneurial drive, and local market identity.

Recent industry developments underscore this shift: many national firms are consolidating under single brands, centralizing middle- and back-office functions, and reorienting toward corporate operating structures to drive private-equity returns. These changes may make sense for aging owners seeking a graceful exit, but they can stifle innovation and limit the flexibility of growth-oriented advisors.

Service and Technology Platforms

These firms cater to fully independent RIAs who want infrastructure, technology, and compliance support without giving up ownership. They enable advisors to operate independently while outsourcing operational complexity. However, these models lack the capital, growth partnership, and alignment mechanisms that allow advisors to access liquidity, fund acquisitions, or participate in collective enterprise value creation at scale.

Concurrent's Position: A Haven for Entrepreneurs

Concurrent occupies a distinct position outside these archetypes. It was built for growth-oriented advisors with entrepreneurial vision and drive. These professionals seek to scale without surrendering. Its mission is to empower builders, not buyers; to back entrepreneurs, not absorb them.

Where others are “integrating” to achieve scale, Concurrent is building scale to preserve independence.

While many in the industry are shifting toward centralized integrator models, as exemplified by recent rebranding and operational overhauls among major national RIAs, Concurrent is intentionally swimming against the current. The firm believes scale and collaboration can be achieved without assimilation, and that diversity of brands, client niches, and business models creates strength, not friction.

Concurrent also serves as a natural home for aspiring aggregators who share its purpose of empowering entrepreneurs but need greater scale, capital access, and infrastructure to compete in an increasingly institutionalized marketplace. Through its partnership model, Concurrent provides these firms the resources to grow while preserving their cultural DNA and local autonomy.

What's the alternative to the industry's consolidation wave?

The alternative to the industry's consolidation wave is a platform that celebrates independence, fosters growth, and ensures that the next generation of advisors can build without having to sell. Concurrent's structure ensures it never has to change its stripes. It can remain advisor-centric, collaborative, and entrepreneurial at its core.

The Concurrent Partnership Model

Concurrent's minority investment structure allows advisors to take on a strategic partner without relinquishing control. Through its investment arm, Concurrent Partners, the firm acquires non-controlling stakes in affiliated practices, providing liquidity and growth capital. Advisors receive a mix of cash and equity, creating cross-ownership and deep alignment. Tag-along rights allow advisors to participate in future monetization events, such as a sale or IPO, alongside Concurrent, typically up to 49.9% of their firm's equity.

The result of this partnership model is an ecosystem in which advisors and the platform grow together. Advisors maintain at least 50.1% ownership, ensuring ongoing independence, while gaining access to recurring liquidity windows, enterprise-level valuation multiples, and the infrastructure to scale efficiently. With valuations driven by scale, diversity of revenue, growth, and alignment, Concurrent allows advisors to tap into the multiple expansion garnered by traditional roll ups without sacrificing control, turning competitive models on their heads and leaving the benefit of the growth in equity value where it belongs—in the hands of the advisors.

Case Studies in Advisor Partnership

The following case studies illustrate how advisors within the Concurrent ecosystem utilize the partnership model to achieve key strategic goals: (1) De-risking and accessing liquidity, (2) facilitating internal succession, and (3) funding inorganic growth opportunities.

▶ Case Study 1: De-Risking and Accessing Liquidity

In 2020, an established $900k producer joined Concurrent's first round of minority investments—over time, taking more than $3.2MM off the table and still retaining 66% ownership of their practice. The advisor sought to participate in the founding round by entering into the initial, minimal exchange of risk designed to create alignment with Concurrent and establish optionality for future liquidity. Concurrent acquired an 8% revenue interest at a 3.5× multiple, providing both immediate liquidity and equity in Concurrent. This initial partnership laid the foundation for a multi-stage capital relationship, granting the advisor the ability to return to the liquidity window over time through built-in tag-along rights.

The advisor's experience demonstrates a central feature of Concurrent's model: the ability to take multiple bites of the apple at successively higher valuations. Each transaction reflected a different motivation at a distinct stage of the advisor's business journey, made possible by Concurrent's flexible, advisor-driven capital framework.

Summary of Each Liquidity Round and Strategic Motivation

Year	Advisor Objective
2020	Alignment and participation in Concurrent's founding round. The advisor's goal was to establish partnership, signaling belief in the platform's mission and securing the right, not the obligation, to access liquidity later.
2023	Transition liquidity. During Concurrent's move to its own RIA, the advisor used a second liquidity event to satisfy outstanding obligations to his former broker-dealer, selling an additional 10% of firm revenue at an 8× multiple.
2025	Personal diversification. Having nearly doubled firm revenue over five years, the advisor elected to sell another 15% at a 9× multiple, capturing personal liquidity at valuations often exceeding those seen in full-control transactions.

Financial Summary of Liquidity Events

Over a five-year period, the advisor realized $3.24 million in liquidity while maintaining control and growing firm revenue from $900,000 to $1.5 million. Each subsequent sale occurred at higher valuation multiples as the business scaled and diversified. This upward trajectory validates a key premise of Concurrent's partnership offering: greater scale, diversity of revenue, and alignment drive higher valuations.

Year	Gross Revenue	Percentage Sold	Multiple	Proceeds
2020	$900,000	8%	3.50x	$252,000
2023	$1,200,000	10%	8.00x	$960,000
2025	$1,500,000	15%	9.00x	$2,025,000
Total to Date	$1,500,000	33%	6.54x	$3,237,000

Concurrent's willingness to act as a ready and recurring buyer on demand underscores its confidence in the advisors it backs. Rather than forcing liquidity or dictating timing, Concurrent deepens relationships on the advisor's terms with an approach rooted in trust, partnership, and long-term belief in entrepreneurial advisors as value creators.

By 2025, the advisor had sold 33% of firm revenue, totaling more than \$3.2 million in proceeds while retaining 67% ownership and ongoing growth potential. Assuming 5% annual growth and a 13.5+ $\times$ enterprise multiple in a future monetization event, the advisor could capture an additional \$4.16 million by exercising remaining tag-along rights, while still holding a controlling stake. Combined with a potential sale of the remaining 50.1% equity, the total monetization opportunity exceeds \$8.3 million, representing roughly a 4.5 $\times$ multiple on gross revenue by retirement

Remaining Tag-Along Optionality and Succession

Growth Rate	5%
Years Until Monetization	4

Year	Gross Revenue	Percentage Sold	Multiple	Proceeds
Prior Sales		33%	6.54x	$3,237,000
Remaining Tag Along	$1,823,259	16.9%	13.5x	$4,159,766
Remaining Business Value	$1,823,259	50.1%	1.00x	$913,452
Total	$1,823,259.38	100%	4.56x	$8,310,219.21

This case exemplifies how one advisor satisfied three distinct needs—alignment, transition liquidity, and personal diversification—through a single, flexible capital framework. It shows how Concurrent's partnership model transforms a historically illiquid business into a dynamic, multi-stage wealth-creation vehicle, offering both liquidity on demand and confidence that the partnership deepens, not diminishes, over time.

▶ Case Study 2: Facilitating Internal Succession

A $2.5-million revenue financial advisory practice faced a critical challenge: ensuring a long-term, sustainable succession plan without saddling the next generation (G2) with unmanageable debt or eroding firm culture. Traditional succession models often involve a direct sale to internal successors at fair market value, which can strain cash flow, limit reinvestment potential, and jeopardize the firm's competitive positioning.

The Challenge

The founding advisor sought to achieve a $6.25 million valuation for the business (2.5× revenue). However, under traditional debt financing, this structure would have created an unsustainable path for G2, with a debt service burden exceeding 40% of annual revenue.

This tension illustrated a common dynamic: the higher the seller's desired valuation, the lower the buyer's ability to sustain the business post-sale. Without creative capital structuring, the firm risked either undervaluing the founder's life's work or overleveraging its future leaders.

The Solution: A Balanced Partnership Structure

Concurrent's minority buy-in and tag-along partnership model provided a flexible framework for liquidity, succession, and continuity. Rather than forcing a single, one-time sale, the structure allowed the founder to monetize equity in stages while keeping control and maintaining the firm's culture.

Phase 1: Founding Round (Alignment and Optionality)

The founder sold 10% of the business to Concurrent at a 4.5× multiple, (4.0x in cash, 0.5x in equity), totaling $1 million in cash proceeds and securing access to the broader platform and tag-along rights for future liquidity events.

Phase 2: Strategic Sale to Reach Target Valuation

In a subsequent transaction, the founder can sell an additional 15.56% at a projected 13.5x multiple, totaling $5.25M. Together, the two transactions achieved the desired $6.25 million total valuation while leaving 74% ownership with the next-generation successor.

Transaction Summary

Transaction Phase	Equity Sold	Multiple Applied	Proceeds Realized	Remaining Ownership (G2)
Phase 1- Founding Round	10.00%	4x	$1,000,000	90%
Phase 2- Strategic Sale	15.56%	13.5x	$5,250,000	74.44%
Total	25.56%	9.78x	$6,250,000	74.44%

The See-Saw Effect: Balancing Value and Viability

In any internal succession scenario, if the seller's goal is to maximize valuation, it inherently impacts the successor's sustainability. The analogy often used is a see-saw:

- ➡ When the valuation side rises, the successor's cash flow side falls—all else equal.
- ➡ Traditional debt financing locks both sides in opposition, forcing tradeoffs between seller liquidity and successor viability.

Concurrent's ability to co-invest alongside successors, leveraging its institutional capital and patient partnership structure, effectively raises the entire see-saw, expanding the range of possible win-win outcomes. This structure doesn't eliminate tradeoffs, but it changes the physics: by introducing an external capital partner that is aligned with both generations, the model supports sustainable valuations without crushing cash flow or compromising control.

Illustrative Comparison: Traditional Buyout vs. Tag-Along Model

Traditional G2 Buyout	Concurrent Tag-Along Model
• $6.25M from a full purchase (2.5× gross revenue) • 7-year note at 4% interest • ≈$1.04M annual debt service (~42% of gross revenue) • Limits cash flow and reinvestment capacity	• $6.25M proceeds from a 25.56% sold ($639k revenue) in 2 tranches at a blended 9.78× multiple • Outside capital funds liquidity for G1 • G2 retains 74.44% ownership and full operational control • Stronger growth runway and sustainable cash flow

Outcome: Continuity, Alignment, and Control

The founder achieved full liquidity at market-level valuations, realizing $6.25 million in total proceeds while retaining cultural continuity and long-term participation rights through equity in the broader platform.

The successor (G2) retained majority ownership (74%) and sufficient cash flow to reinvest in team development, technology, and growth initiatives, ensuring long-term competitiveness.

The enterprise preserved its independence, avoiding the path where an internal successor “goes to sleep on Friday as the heir apparent and wakes up Monday as an employee of an integrator.”

Where others are “integrating” to achieve scale, Concurrent is building scale to preserve independence.

Key Takeaways

Concept	Traditional Debt-Funded Buyout	Concurrent Partnership Model
Seller Liquidity	One-time sale, binary outcome	Multiple bites of the apple at rising multiples
Successor Burden	Heavy debt service and cash-flow strain	Supported by co-investment and shared risk
Control & Culture	Risk of loss through external sale	Preserved through majority G2 ownership
Long-Term Alignment	Ends at transaction	Continues through shared equity and growth participation
Outcome	Win-Lose (valuation vs viability)	Win-Win (shared upside and sustainable transition)

Case Study 3: Leveraging Capital and Deal Support to Scale through Acquisition

A mid-sized advisory firm generating approximately $1.4 million in annual revenue sought to acquire a peer practice producing $1.5 million in revenue within the same regional market. The acquisition target represented an ideal strategic and cultural fit—similar client demographics, legacy broker-dealer affiliation, and service philosophy. The deal would more than double the acquiring firm's revenue base and significantly expand its client footprint. Additionally, the selling practice has a low expense structure, ready for the time and attention of an experienced advisory team. The buyer was strategically staffed to take this client base and expand their clients' scope of services. However, access to capital was a key barrier.

The Challenge

The acquiring advisor faced a common constraint among growth-minded independent firms: limited debt capacity.

While the target seller sought $5 million for the business (a valuation of over 3× revenue), the buyer's $1.4 million practice could not support that level of borrowing. Traditional lenders require a debt service coverage ratio (DSCR) of 1.75×, meaning the buyer would need to demonstrate cash flow equal to 1.75 times the annual debt obligation. This standard significantly limited borrowing capacity due to the advisor being staffed for growth and running at below average profit margins (under 40%).

Without a creative solution, the advisor would have been unable to fund the deal or remain competitive against larger, institutionally backed buyers.

The Solution: Strategic Co-Investment Partnership

Concurrent stepped in as a co-investor, expanding its minority ownership position from 8% to 12% in the buyer's firm and acquiring 12% of the seller's firm as part of the transaction. The upsized investment was made at a 7× multiple, providing $1.652 million in proceeds toward the combined purchase. This structure enabled the buyer to fund a $5 million acquisition while preserving control, reducing leverage, and maintaining long-term equity alignment.

Illustrative Structure and Capital Deployment

Metric	Buyer	Seller	Total Post-Deal
Gross Revenue	$1,400,000	$1,500,000	$2,900,000
Minority Partnership	8%	0%	3.86%
Upsized Partnership	4%	12%	8.14%
Total Partnership Post-Deal	12%	12%	12.00%
Multiple on Upsized Partnership	7.0x	7.0x	7.0x
Proceeds	$392,000	$1,260,000	$1,652,000

Practice Acquisition Transaction Summary

Upfront Payment: $3.5 million at closing (including Concurrent's $1.652 million contribution)

Contingent Payments: Three subsequent $500,000 installments tied to client retention, funded organically through cash flow.

Post-Closing Impact: Combined revenue of $2.9 million, improved margins through scale, and accelerated enterprise value creation

By partnering with Concurrent, the acquiring firm effectively wrote a $5 million check while only funding $1.7 million of the down payment out of pocket (leveraging debt facilitated by Concurrent), maintaining independence and reducing debt exposure.

Strategic Benefit	Description
Empowered Acquisition Capability	Advisors gain institutional capital without losing control or identity.
Reduced Leverage & Risk	Co-investment funding lowers debt service and enhances balance sheet flexibility.
Enhanced Competitiveness	Enables advisors to pay full-value prices and win deals previously out of reach.
Valuation Leverage	As Concurrent's enterprise multiple rises, advisors can achieve greater scale with less dilution.

Results and Strategic Implications

The partnership transformed an otherwise unattainable acquisition into a strategic growth inflection point.

The acquiring firm achieved immediate scale, gained operational synergies, and enhanced enterprise value, all while preserving autonomy. Concurrent's co-investment provided the firepower to compete for top-tier opportunities without surrendering control, and future valuations (e.g., at 15× multiples) that will further amplify the benefits of this co-investment model. Since closing, the practice's run rate gross revenue now exceeds $3.6 million due to strong client retention and increased wallet share in the acquired book.

Key Takeaways: The Concurrent Advantage

Conclusion: A Model Built for Every Stage of an Advisor's Journey

The three case studies showcased illustrate how Concurrent's partnership model creates real, repeatable outcomes for advisors by meeting them where they are in their business lifecycle.

De-Risking and Accessing Liquidity: Advisors can take multiple bites of the apple over time, accessing liquidity at rising valuations while maintaining control. This creates personal diversification and long-term alignment between advisors and the enterprise.

Facilitating Internal Succession: Founding advisors can design seamless, debt-light transitions that preserve firm culture and empower next-generation leaders. By leveraging outside capital and flexible structures, advisors can ensure continuity without burdening successors or diluting firm identity.

Funding Inorganic Growth: Concurrent's co-investment model transforms scale aspirations into reality, enabling advisors to pursue strategic acquisitions and expand market presence without sacrificing autonomy or financial stability.

Together, these examples demonstrate the power of alignment, optionality, and shared ownership in an increasingly consolidated industry. Concurrent's mission is not to buy advisors but to back them. Through thoughtful partnership and long-duration capital, Concurrent helps advisors de-risk, grow, and ultimately build enduring enterprises that reflect their entrepreneurial vision.
